

STUDY ABROAD TUITION REMISSION & STUDY ABROAD

Updated July 2020

Creighton University students who are eligible for tuition remission or FACHEX benefits may only use those benefits on pre-approved study abroad programs. The Global Engagement Office (GEO) provides a list of the programs which accept tuition remission or FACHEX, and students may also speak directly with a Global Programs Coordinator for additional information. If a student decides to participate in a program which does not accept tuition remission or FACHEX benefits, they must pay the difference between their employee benefit remission program and the special cost to Creighton University for the study abroad program. Regular University registration and fees, the tuition remission or FACHEX administrative access fee, as well as any additional fees for special Creighton University programs (i.e. Global Scholars) are applicable during each study abroad semester. Short travel courses, including FLPAs, are not covered under the employee benefit remission program, and students must pay the full fee for those programs. Please see a Global Programs Coordinator for advising and options regarding tuition remission and study abroad.

The information below is general and intended to be a guide only. Each student's financial situation is unique. Students must consult with the Financial Aid Office to discuss specific financial details.
