

NURSING MAJORS

CAREER OUTCOMES

The Traditional Bachelor of Science in Nursing (BSN) program prepares graduates for entry-level professional nursing practice in both hospital and community-based settings. By preparing nurses who are strong in both theoretical knowledge and clinical skills, Creighton BSN graduates continue to exceed the national average for first-time pass rates on the national licensing exam.

Creighton Nursing majors learn how to manage and improve care outcomes by gaining experience in a myriad of clinical settings – critical care, community-based care, public health, pediatrics, and behavioral health. Nearly 100% of all BSN graduates from Creighton are employed either by graduation or within six months. Just as Nursing majors gain experience in a variety of clinical settings during their undergraduate studies, they also go on to garner meaningful employment across the country in virtually every hospital department as well as community practices and private settings. A representative listing of these outcomes are provided here from data gathered from graduates from the years 2015-2018. Additionally, a handful of students go on to graduate or doctorate level nursing, nurse practitioner programs, or other professional school health sciences programs.

The median annual starting salary for Creighton Nursing graduates was $50,000 in May 2018.
